How do I decide how many points to give for each criteria?

It is nearly impossible to have a rubric that honors the wide variety of contextual situations in which students live and learn throughout Wisconsin. Therefore, it will be important that the candidate communicates both what they did, and the context in which they have lived and gone to school, within their answers. There is some subjectivity in making point decisions, but points should be awarded based on these ideas:

- The response to a given prompt is complete, regardless of the language in which it was written. There is not a priority around a candidate adhering to standard American English, nor should they be negatively considered if they do not.
- The response is compelling, and help to tell the full story of the candidate.
- The response helps demonstrate the candidate's context in which they lived and learned.
- The response demonstrates excellence within the candidate's context (which may be different from other candidate's context).
- The response shows how the candidate acted in ways to benefit others as well as themselves.
- The response shows the acceptance of personal challenge or rigor, even if "perfect" success was not achieved.
- The response demonstrates strong, positive personal characteristics such as: humility; honesty; inclusion of and uplifting others; determination and hard work; social justice; engaged citizenship; demonstrating kindness; innovation and problem solving; and responsibility.
- Consider reserving the full point value in any criteria only for exemplar answers.

Other considerations:

- This process does NOT prioritize any one "correct" response or minimum criteria for eligibility. A candidate does not need to have a "perfect" record of success to be considered. For example, there is a fallacy that a student must have a 4.0 to be "worthy". This is not true.
- Reviewers must consider their personal biases before scoring, and work to identify and eliminate any personal biases that impact scoring (either positively or negatively). Candidates should only be scored on the information they provide.
